Arizona State University (ASU) and the School of Social Transformation seek applications for a one-year Postdoctoral Research Associate position in Women and Gender Studies with an anticipated start date of August 2018. This is a full-time, benefits-eligible appointment with no tenure-implications, and is renewable on an annual basis (August 16 – May 15), contingent upon satisfactory performance, availability of resources, and the needs of the university.

Minimum Qualifications: Applicants are required to have a PhD in Women and Gender Studies by time of appointment (August 2018), but have completed the PhD no earlier than May of 2016.

Desired Qualifications: We are particularly interested in candidates whose work is intersectional, understanding intersectionality not as descriptors of identity but as a critique of structural inequalities, and who can teach core classes in Women and Gender Studies and a methods course at the MA level. We are particularly interested in candidates whose work focuses on Sexuality Studies, and who could teach a graduate course in Sexuality Studies.

The position will include teaching of a variety of courses: large online, smaller in-person, and graduate level (2/2). The successful candidate will be matched with a mentor for assistance in development of both research and teaching, work on a book manuscript or article(s), and present one public lecture about their research.

Initial application deadline is June 15; if not filled, complete applications will be reviewed every two weeks thereafter until the search is closed. Electronic submission of materials is required. To apply, please submit electronically the following materials to SSTSearch@asu.edu: curriculum vitae; letter outlining the project to be pursued during the fellowship year; writing sample; and names and contact information for three reference writers. A background check is required for employment.

Women and Gender Studies (WGS) at ASU is one of the largest, most vibrant in the US, offering undergraduate, MA and PhD programs, an undergraduate certificate in LGBT studies, and graduate certificates in Gender Studies and Sexuality Studies. The program is housed within the nation’s first School of Social Transformation (SST), a new transdisciplinary school unique to ASU that brings together interdisciplinary fields to integrate the study of gender, race, class, sexuality and nation. We are focused on transformational knowledge--new research approaches, themes and questions that are embedded in broader historical, social and cultural processes of change – and pursuing novel collaborative forms of teaching and knowledge creation to make discoveries, to create social innovations and to engage with others in changing the world.

Arizona State University is a VEVRAA Federal Contractor and an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action employer. All qualified applicants will be considered without regard to race, color, sex, religion, national origin, disability, protected veteran status, or any other basis protected by the law.
